

ENGL 7/8008
Dr. Will Duffy
Online

Theory & Practice in Teaching Online

How do you design an online course that's both accessible and engaging? What makes digital learning environments equitable—or not? What do online instructors need to know about generative AI?

This course explores the pedagogical, technological, and ethical dimensions of teaching in digital environments. Designed for current and future online teachers, ENGL 7/8008 blends theory with application to investigate topics such as a universal design for learning, student engagement, surveillance and privacy, multimodal literacies, and other related concerns.

Throughout the course, students will also have opportunities to adapt course concepts to their own subject areas and teaching contexts, with assignments and discussions encouraging reflection on how to leverage disciplinary norms, curricular needs, and learning goals to design effective online learning spaces.