

Call for Abstracts: 13th Social Work Symposium

April 11, 2025
University of Memphis
Memphis, Tennessee

Social Work: Advocating for Community Well-Being

The School of Social Work at the University of Memphis invites practitioners, students, and scholars at all levels in social work or related disciplines to submit abstracts for presentation during the symposium. This year, we highlight the essential role of social work in promoting holistic health and prosperity within communities. In an increasingly interconnected and complex world, social workers are uniquely positioned to address the multifaceted challenges that individuals and communities face. As a result, priority will be given to presentations that highlight the role of social work in developing strategies that prioritize the health, dignity, and empowerment of all community members. We particularly seek presentations on evidence-based practice, cultural diversity, or ethics.

Submission Guidelines:

Abstracts must contain no more than 500 words. Submissions must also include three learning objectives (no more than 25 words each), a 50-word overview, and a 50-word bio for each author. Please submit your abstract here:

Deadline for submission is November 15, 2024.

Authors will be notified of submission results by December 12, 2024.
